When are of the burning grass.

We now heard galloping hoofs, and we soon saw two Indians (Osages) approaching through the smoke. "Where are you going?" they asked, in their own language. "To Gray Horse," our driver replied, in the same tongue. They told him that the prairie was a mass of flame in that direction, and that we must go back. We responded that we must go back. We responded that all was flame in that direction. according to size. Notwithstanding the indifference to danger usually ascribed to redskins, these Indians showed unmistakable signs of terror. Some further quick conversation informed us that they, like ourselves, had seized an opportunity to penetrate the line of flame, thinking thus to escape.

We all were now inclosed in a grad-We all white section at the space ground us by burning off the grass—to start a "back-fire," as it is called—was our only safety; and this we attempted. A large space was cleared before the oncoming fire reached us. We hoped to escape with but singed yebrows, and a few moments of suffo- use. cation; and this we considered a fortu-nate deliverance. But we found our LIQUORS. last chance failing us. The beck-fire we had started against the wind had burned on the dry grass, and in doing so had served as a furnice to dry the greener grass. Thus the prairie-fire, reaching our burned district, found the greener grasses killed and dried, and hence had almost as much firely as outside.

The fire was now close around us, The varying currents of air heated by the flame whirled and rose, and gusts of cold air, rushing in to replace the hot air, caused a whirl-wind, and a great well of smoke and flame was thus formed. Within this well we stood as yet unharmed and with a constant supply of cool air, but expect-

It was a dreadful moment; the mother and the child were crying; the Indians, with uplifted arms, were calling upon the Great Spiril, in a weird chant.

Suddenly we felt an unusually strong rush of cold air from one side, and, looking up, I saw a strange and wel-come sight. A long tongue of flame had run toward and into our circular prison from the main fire, and had burned a lane from the outlying burnt area in to us. Through this lane, formed by walls of fire, came rushing in a current of cold, clear air. This kept Manufacturers of

The topics are always those which are uppermost in the public mind—in morals, politics, science, literature, business, finance, industrial economy, social and municipal affairs, etc—in short, all subjects on which Americaus require and desire to be informed. No magazine follows so closely from month to month the course of public interest. All subjects are treated of impartially on both sides. The contributors to the Review are the men and women to whom the world looks for the most authoritative statements on the subjects of the day. No other periodical can point to such a succession of distinguished writers. The list is a roll of the people who are making the history, controlling the affairs, and leading the opinion of the age, such as Mr. Gladstone, the Prime Minister of England; Mr. Blaine; Signor Crispi, ex-Prime land; Mr. Blaine; Signor Crispi, ex-Prime Minister of Italy; Baron Hirsch; H. R. H.

the Count of Paris; Cardinal Gibbons; Bishops Potter, Doane, Mallalier, Foss, etc., esc.
The time when these subjects are treated of by the contributors is the very time when the subjects are in the multi-mind—not a month or two after people have cessed to think of them. The promptness with which the Re-VIEW furnishes its readers with the most au-thoritative information upon the tepics of the day is one of its most valuable features.
